

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Different optimizing methods are applied in response to such a memory hierarchy to which a program mainly accesses when the program is executed. A memory hierarchy to which a program mainly accesses is designated by a user with employment of either a compiler option designation or a designation statement contained in the program. In a compiler, a memory hierarchy designation is analyzed, and an optimizing process according to the designated memory hierarchy is carried out.